Reports come from the Porcupines that quite a number of stray cattle have found their way into the herds there.

Philip Fortier's residence is just about completed, and is without question the finest residence in our southern suburbs.

The poultry thief has been busy of late. Several suspects are being watched, and it is hoped the guilty party will be brought to justice.

C. A. Crawford has just installed a new and improved sewing machine for sewing leather and will in future give special attention to shoe-repairing.

The greatest danger from influenza is of its resulting in pneumonia. This can be obviated by using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, as it not only cures influenza, but counteracts any tendency of the disease towards pneumonia. Sold by all dealers.

The rush of harvesters into the mining districts is about over, and the tide is likely to be at a standstill now till spring, when it will again sweep eastward.

Work on the Anglican church is being rushed. There are now six carpenters at work, and an effort is being made to have the building ready for opening and dedication about Christmas.

The heaviest wind for the season prevailed from Saturday to Monday. Many windows were shattered and all the snow which had covered the ground for several days was blown away.

Mr. D. C. McIvor, who spent a couple of months at her former home in Winton, Ont., has returned home. Mr. and Mrs. McIvor are the proud parents of a bouncing baby girl. Congratulations.

Many persons find themselves affected with a persistent cough after an attack of influenza. As this cough can be promptly cured by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, it should not be allowed to run on until it becomes troublesome. Sold by all dealers.

A sprained ankle will usually disable the injured person for three or four weeks. This is due to lack of proper treatment. When Chamberlain's Liniment is applied a cure may be effected in three or four days. This liniment is one of the best and most remarkable preparations in use. Sold by all dealers.

A prairie fire was started Monday afternoon about midway between here and Pincher City, and driven by the high winds had gained alarming proportions ere nightfall. At night the surrounding country for miles was illumined. Fortunately the heavy rain of midnight quenched the flames before they had reached a homestead.

THE STRUGGLE IN BRITAIN

The Lords have rejected the budget and in the same breath the Lords have precipitated a struggle between the commons and the hereditary house that will in all likelihood end disastrously for themselves. The history of Britain is amply illustrated by acid and bloody struggles between the sovereign and the Lords and the House of Commons. Knowing full well the history of the past and the almost inevitable result which is sure to follow every attempt to thwart the public will, the action of the Lords seems understandable.

It is now over three hundred years that a finance bill has been thrown out and the grand mistake of the middle ages should not be repeated in a modern house with supposedly modern ideas. The advice of such men as Rosebury and Cromer could have been well heeded, but the average Lord preferred following the party leaders. These leaders unmistakably are seeking to bring on an early election so as to gain an opportunity to again assume the reins of government.

Tariff reform is being offered as an offset to the budget proposals which is another attempt to again take the burden of the taxes off the Lords and place them on foreign powers. A beautiful idea if it were practicable. It now looks as if the whole question of free trade will be again brought up with more emphasis in the next election. At all events the Lords have everything to lose and nothing to gain in the coming struggle.

OUR BARGAIN OFFER

As will be noticed elsewhere in this paper, the Chronicle has closed arrangements with three of the leading papers in Winnipeg—the Weekly Free Press and Prairie Farmer, the Nor West Farmer and the Western Home Monthly—that enables us to offer these periodicals with the Chronicle at a bargain price of $3.00 for the four papers. This combination is easily the best that has come out this fall, and as not one of them ever laps the other, each being distinctive in its own field the combination is an ideal one. Any subscription entrusted to us will receive prompt attention and be forwarded without delay to the offices of publication.

FARMERS SHOULD ORGANIZE

Why should the farmers not organize? What other business on earth has not organized? Too long the farmers have delayed organizing; hence, the harder has been their struggle. The railroads have their organization; so have the bankers; so have the manufacturers; and all other business interests. If the farmers produce and after it is finished, selling it back to them at the highest price, then who would deny that the farmer who earns by his toil and the toil of his wife and children, has not the right to organize to protect the selling price of the products of his labor? Organization is the only way farmers can accomplish good results. This is a nation of organized interests, and under the proper management, the country is better off because of the organization of farmers. When the farmer's products leave him, they are taken by the railroads which are organized, then they go to the manufacturers who are organized, and when they reach the farmer again as a finished product, they come from mercantile organizations. The producers of all this great wealth (and wealth-producing products) represent the only link in the chain that is not strongly and concretely organized. American Co-Operative Journal.

THE BUDGET

THROWN OUT

By A Large Majority Lands-down's Resolution is Carried

London, December 1.—Last night Lord Lansdowne's resolution to throw out the budget was carried in the Lords by a vote of 380 to 76.

Over eighty unionist Lords absented themselves as they feared that Lansdowne's amendment would precipitate a grave crisis or perhaps restrict forever the constitutional rights of the House of Lords.

A great demonstration was planned to take place outside the assembly room as soon as the vote was made known but the presence of a large body of police and a timely downpour of rain scattered the large crowd.

Happenings at Blairmore

The social given in the Baptist church last week was a great success.

Finlay McLaren returned from Macled where he was one of the jury at the assizes.

All the machinery for the Rocky Mountain Cement company is now on the ground and operations are expected to commence next week.

It is rumored around town that Mac On will erect a large brick store in the spring. The building will occupy the site of the present store.

Blairmore is still in darkness on account of the generator being lost in transit. It is understood that the "lost" has been found.

It is reported that the parties building the government road between the Prairie and the B. C. boundary uncovered a seam of coal on the property of the Sentinel Coal Syndicate.

H. J. Matheson is having a camp built at his new coal property on the South Fork. Development work on the coal seams will commence next week.

Blairmore will have a hockey team this winter and it won't be an easy unit to crack either. It is expected Frank will unite with Blairmore and thus be enabled to enter a team in the league.

John McGee, the popular entertainer, is putting the rink in first class shape and will have good ice in the course of a few days. Patrons may rest assured that John will be found on deck and have everything in first-class order.

EDITOR'S TRIBULATIONS

Editing a newspaper is a fine thing, and no mistake, says an exchange. If we publish jokes people say we are rattle brained. If we don't we are fools. If we publish original matter they say we do not give them enough selections. If we give them selections we're too lazy to write. If we don't go to church we are heathens. If we do we are hypocrites. If we remain in the office we had ought to be out looking for news. If we go out, then we are not attending to business. If we wear old clothes they laugh at us. If we wear good clothes they say we are extravagant. Now, what are we to do? Just as likely as not someone will say that we perloined this from another paper. So we did.

CHAPTER IX AROUND THE CAMP FIRE

Several hours afterwards Mrs. and Mr. Jepson and Roseline and Paul were all seated comfortably around a crackling fire of pine knots whose emissions of blackened smoke curled and swirled themselves up a jaggedly shattered chimney. Mr. Jepson and Paul smoked leisurely with long Indian pipes of stone which had been presented to the engineer years before at the house of McLintock's mountain. Roseline and Mrs. Jepson chatted quietly with them recounting and recapitulating the incidents and events of the hunt.

While they were resting quietly the cook, who found favor in the name of Zacharius more often "Zucky," was preparing a typical camp meal. Although Zucky's name was a religious one, it should not be taken for granted at once that he was an observant of a "local preacher" for he was far from either. Zucky had the annoying habit of blurted out at times the most irreverent and embarrassing bits of mountain history and then he took up with camp cooking that endangered at times the safety of the most substantial dinner. As a story teller he was unequalled in the camp, which fact probably gained the favor of the engineers.

"What is Zucky doing now?" inquired Roseline. With this Mrs. Jepson satately asked toward the culinary department, where she found the same Zucky looking away with a sullenness at a large cake he had made previously a few days before. "Why, Zucky, what are you doing?" "Oh, I'm spagetti away at this petrified Christmas cake and I can't even get my teeth into the sticky crust."

"But you must not put your teeth into cake intended for the table, you must have some regard for us, Zucky," Zucky stood for seconds gazing at the hardened cake and then he took up the hatchet and chipped off another tack. "Where did you get the flour Zucky?" asked Mrs. Jepson. "Let me see" and Zucky stroked his beard as if he had got down to some hard thinking for once. "I got it out of that barrel that stands in the left hand side of the pie cupboard what got broke on the way up from the landing three years ago. That flour was gray looking I know but I thought it were alright."

And then Zucky stamped around the floor and nearly missed hitting the engineer's wife as he unconsciously swung a rolling pin and which rolling pin unconsciously landed in the broth.

"Oh Zucky" and Mrs. Jepson fled and spread the fatal news. Out came Paul and the engineer into the troubled kitchen. "What's the matter with this cake?" asked Mr. Jepson.

"Try it" said Zucky. The engineer no sooner had a chip of it in his mouth than he hurried out suddenly shouting to you to get outland cannot be steady of heart."

Zucky smiled. Paul sprang to the side of the speechless one, but he received a cuff which rendered him less conscious. After a few minutes passed which there was the most painful silence one could imagine, the cake was kindly lifted and placed on the doorstep and to-day, it is said, it is in a nearby town and used by the latest business man as a stone. Such is fate.

Zucky's perturbed feelings soon became calmed as the urgency of a prompt dinner for the hungry hunting party came into his strid senses. In an hour he had the stag roast smoking on the centre of the table. Roseline threw up her arms in delight at the prospect of a meal of game.

Zucky brushed about and served like an approved page. He made the extra cuts and poured extra draughts of wine and never forgot himself in the latter duty as his falling was quite pronounced. No sooner was the dinner over than Mrs. Jepson ordered Zucky to throw aside quickly the dishes and remnants and come in and take his place around the fire.

Zucky did so. He commented on the fine dinner he had had and declared that the wine was slightly better than usual as he had emptied the beauty in the wrong jar the last time.

This brought the ladies to their feet. And for a brief spell Zucky was in disgrace.

The engineer and Paul took out their pipes, filled them and commenced to smoke leisurely.

"Did you ever hunt Zacharius?" said Paul.

"Did I?" replied Zucky.

STORY OF A CROCK

"He's awfully handsome," she mused, and so noble looking, and not at all like a milkman. Oh I am so sorry. I wonder what his name is. I shall look on the tickets. But, alas, I put the last one out yesterday morning. I'll never know now."

John went home that day a sadder and a wiser man and minus a good paying customer. He felt he had missed something, he had been too greedy. But there was nothing to do now but to bury his disappointment and get to work.

The assembly hall was filled to its utmost capacity by the friends of the young doctors who were to graduate. The college colors and the flowers added beauty to the scene. The gold medalist of the year read the valedictory address. All eyes turned admiringly to him. Tall, broad-shouldered, lithe of limb, ruddy of cheek, he was a good specimen of physical health, while his broad forehead and keen but kindly brown eyes bespoke his intellectual strength. The address was a success. So was the man's personality and the appreciative audience demonstrated it by applause. In the third row from the front sat a girl and her mother. The girl was fair to look upon, with large blue eyes and yellow hair and pink and white complexion. She looked at him and their eyes met. Where had she seen him before?

Then the color suddenly left her face and returned with a warm rush. Her lips parted and her eyes shone like stars. Her breath came quickly.

She knew where she had seen him before, and a strange happiness came over her, and people looking at her that evening thought "Kitty Jackson was getting lovelier than ever."

An hour later Dr. John Smith, gold medalist, was bowing low over Kitty Jackson's hand. They had taken to each other amazingly. Mrs. Jackson thought, and she was satisfied. And when Dr. Smith asked permission to kiss her she was not surprised but what did surprise her was the congratulatory cheerfulness at their parting, and it was this:

"Is eleven o'clock too early to come? You know, I am allowing for besting sins."

"Not at all. I shall be ready. Mother gets up early sometimes, you know."

"Then they both laughed."

"Well, good-bye, and don't forget to leave out the crock."

"Alright, she please leave fifty cents worth of tickets? Good-bye!"

And then they laughed again.

KARMA.

And Zucky began.

BY THE SOUTH

FORK SCRIBE

Great Promise of South Fork Coal and Agricultural Wealth

It gives me great pleasure Mr. Editor to inform the outside world of the beauties and the richness of the valley of the South Fork river.

Upon leaving the C. P. R., at Burnsville or Lundbreck and travelling in a southwesterly direction we soon come to the homestead of Joseph Johnson. This homestead is situated on section 32, range 2, township 6, west of the 5th Meridian. As you go down the banks of the river and cross at the Garfield ford into one of the most beautiful valleys in Canada and not only the most beautiful but the richest valley. This river is a very clear stream and running very swift through deep canyons and over beautiful falls and has a fall of about four hundred feet in six miles. It is well supplied with trout and grayling as far up as the headwaters.

Crossing over to the South side of the valley and west, the first place of importance which you arrive at, is a large coal field belonging to Mr. George Jackson and J. H. Farmer, situated in township 6. On the slope of this valley there are eight well defined seams of coal. These seams run south for a distance of seven miles and as far south as the coal property of the Beaver Creek Coal Co., who have a large force of men opening up the seams and doing considerable development work.

Across the river and to the north one can see a splendid homestead with splendid buildings. On this ranch are raised admirable crops of wheat and oats. The owner of this ranch is H. H. Heron. To the west is Mr. Sedgewick's horse ranch. There is an excellent range for stock in this valley, cattle and horses find abundant food in winter as well as in summer.

Travelling on to the south-west we again strike the river and here the banks contain an inexhaustible supply of fire brick clay, which has been thoroughly tested and found to make a splendid brick. This will be an important asset in building up the Pass towns and coke ovens.

Farther west Mr. Drake's ranch looms into view. This farm is fenced and much improved. To the northwest of it is the ranch of Thomas Ashdown. This ranch contains a fine park, a natural shelter for stock in winter.

Just below this ranch the south fork of the Old Man's river receives another tributary known as the Little South Fork. In the angle of land formed here, a large slate quarrie has been discovered but as yet no development work has been done as transportation is a difficult problem.

Soon the river runs through a typical canyon, known as the Iron canyon. Here the Carbon Hill Coal & Coke Company have their iron mine. In olden times the Indians came here to get their "paint."

On section 16 George Jackson has located a beautiful homestead. The front of it is terraced to the river. The whole ranch consists of a number of high level tablelands. The soil is black and easily worked, watered by a sparkling brook.

Directly across the river is the Carbon Hill coal mine which is under development. The grade of coal is equal to that of any other in the Pass. There are a large number of men working now. To the north side of the river an office has been built, other buildings are in course of erection.

A company is now surveying a railway line from Burnsville to the South Fork country and to the summit of the North Kootenay Pass. This line will open an immense country and create much stir in the valley.

About one mile west is another coal mine, called the Byron Creek mine, and is owned by the West Canadian Coal company. It is opened on Byron Creek and runs as far south as the South Fork. A mile and a half still farther west is another extensive seam of coal. This has been opened up at Blairmore.

Running south for twelve miles the coal seams crop out here and there. Eight miles of these coal mines are leased by local parties.

About four miles west you come to the Hastings Syndicate mine, better known as the Head Syndicate mine. Mr. Leslie Hill is the consulting engineer and manager of this syndicate. "There are eight miles of outcroppings here," said Mr. Hill. Exhaustive preparations are under way to estimate the exact grade and amount of coal in sight. So far the investigation shows that the seam is the same as that of the International at Coleman. The entire formation is tilted at an angle of 45 degrees to the perpendicular. There is 2000 feet of the seam above the surface level. This property runs from Coleman to the South Fork, a distance of fourteen miles.

West of this and running from Gardner Creek to the lime rock in the mountains is, the last but not the least, prospect in the South Fork valley. A syndicate has a prospector's lease on fourteen sections of coal lands, which have been prospected and opened this summer. They had a large number of men working and developing the seams and found them varying in width from three to thirteen feet.

There are a number of other indications of coal seams in this valley but they are not prospected. Good times of lands. Senator McLaren intends to put in a sawmill as soon as transportation is provided. The Chicago and Alberta Oil company have already gone to some expense in building a passable wagon road for fifteen miles to their oil wells on Lost Creek and are now installing an up-to-date well-drilling outfit.

The South Fork country is in the lime-light now and will in time be the industrial centre of Southern Alberta.

Lundbreck Notes

Mrs. Dr. Donald is at present visiting her daughter at Lethbridge.

The Galbraith Coal Company are fitting up the electric plant and will soon have the Lundbreck system in operation. We hear the wires are to be extended to Cowley and both towns will be lighted in the very near future.

The grass-fed southern Alberta cattle have again made an enviable record. P. Burns & Co., last week purchased $20,000 worth of cattle which ranged north-east of Calgary, averaging 1470 pounds.

James Manter has been convicted of manslaughter in connection with the murder of Annie Mallins, a Newfoundland girl, at Arlington, Mass., a little over a year ago. He was sentenced to life imprisonment. The jury also found an accomplice, who likely be given a penitentiary term also.
